Many homelessness projects are developing positive engagement activities for their residents ranging from photography to football, gardening to scuba diving and everything else in between.

Activity programmes have been a catalyst for homeless people to turn their lives around and make spectacular progress towards successful resettlement. This meeting will bring together workers from projects across the North of England to discuss what works.

You are invited to:

- meet other workers doing the same job as you
- share approaches that work
- become part of a support network that will help you to continue to improve your practice
- hear how photography has enabled drug users to stop using
- find out how a group of homeless young people organized and ran a huge summer music festival
- learn about Manchester's 'Rebuilding Lives' Activities Forum.
